Pease Point Picnic

This was planned for the Sunday School of the Congregational Church. But somebody in the town who wanted to go was invited.

We met at the Cove, went across in Bradford's gunwale. Each carried his own lunch. Then there was a huge kettle of fish chowder—enough for everybody—made by Allen Prior, Supt. of the Sunday Sch. and the miles at the bridge.

In the morning of the day weather was hot or threatening. The church here was rung to tell people the picnic was put off. There was a good deal of singing during the day and always on the return trip to the Cove. Allen Prior was the prime mover in the whole affair which was in full swing during the Civil War and I think was kept up into the 70's.

PINE POINT PICNIC

This was planned for the Sunday School of the Congregational Church but every body in the town who wanted to go was invited. We met at the Cove, went across in Bradford Weston's gandalon(?). Each carried his own lunch. Then there was a huge kettle of fish chowder – enough for every body – made by Allen Prior, Supt. of the Sunday Sch. and the miller at the Bridge. If the morning of the day selected was hot or threatening, the church bell was rung to tell people the picnic was put off. There was a good deal of singing during the day and always on the return trip to the Cove. Allen Prior was the prime mover in the whole affair which was in full swing during the Civil War and I think was kept up into the '70s.
